What's New In Capturemation?

Capturemation was released in October 2000 as a self-contained 32-bit executable that runs on Windows operating systems. Capturemation is a command line utility written in C, C++ and the Free Pascal language. It runs "silently" as an active window and needs no user interaction. Capturemation comes with a built-in library to allow the application to interact with Windows API functions to get the images using the formats as BMP, JPEG, GIF, PNG, TIFF, etc. It provides a Windows interface for the applications that are written in C, C++, Delphi and other similar languages. These languages are not used directly. The applications written in C, C++, Delphi or other languages need to use the library functions provided by Capturemation and access to the Capturemation functions to interact with Capturemation. A lot of users have asked for online availability and the option to run the utility as a service in Windows. To achieve this we developed an application that can help you to work with Capturemation from any application and it doesn't require you to have Visual C++ installed on your machine. Simply download the application from our website and run it to work with Capturemation.
